

Loveland Synopsis

Loveland is a Romance, Sci-fi feature film.

Set in a futuristic city, Jack, a hardened assassin, longs for an emotional connection, though he will never trust anyone enough for it to happen.

He then sees a young woman, April on a busy train. He follows her to a nightclub where she is a singer. April is also hardened, and has given up on trust and love.

They meet for a late night dinner. Jack quickly develops feelings he has never felt before. The two of them become closer.

Jack suddenly becomes sick, and seeks medical advice.

Jack is followed by mysterious man on the street. Jack learns he is a from a large biotech corporation.

It seems the only person who can help Jack is a genetic scientist, Doctor Bergman, who once worked for the corporation.

The more in love Jack becomes, the more he deteriorates.

Doctor Bergman finally reveals to Jack, that he is dying from his feelings of love and that the Corporation once experimented on him as a child.

April finally betrays Jack, and gives him up to the Corporation, but Jack escapes and returns to April to say one final goodbye.
